

The Day of Pentecost

Key words

Disciples: That's us!

Wind: Blow.

Flame: Siren.

Holy Spirit: Hurray!

About ten days after they had watched him going up into heaven, Jesus' disciples (that's us) were all together in a room in Jerusalem. The disciples (that's us) were praying and singing hymns and waiting, waiting for a gift. A gift that Jesus had promised to all his disciples (that's us), the gift of the Holy Spirit (Hurray).

As the disciples (that's us) prayed they began to feel something strange. It was like a gentle wind (blow) but as the wind (blow) blew it got stronger and stronger until it was like a great and mighty roaring gale (blow) whistling round their ears and filling the whole room that they were in.

Then, as the wind (blow) blew the disciples (that's us) saw a flame (siren) hovering above them. The flame (siren) burned brightly and danced in the mighty wind (blow). But as the Disciples (that's us) watched, the Flame (siren) divided and each little flame (siren) rested on the disciples (that's us) heads.

As the flame (siren) touched them they were each filled with the Holy Spirit (Hurray).

They were all dancing and singing and praising God and before the disciples (that's us) knew it, the door was open and it was as if the mighty wind (blow) was pushing them down the stairs and into the street.

The Holy Spirit (Hurray) gave them the words to say and they told everyone they met about Jesus, and that day three thousand people believed and became disciples (that's us) and were themselves filled with the Holy Spirit (Hurray!).
