One day a farmer (Oo Ar) went out to sow (sew) his seed (Point). He took handfuls of seed (point) and scattered them all over the ground (spin).

As the farmer (Oo Ar) sowed (sew, his seed (point) Some seed (point) fell on the path. Here the ground (spin) was hard and the seed (point) could not sink in. It just lay on the hard ground (spin) and flocks of birds came and ate the seed (point) and none of it could grow (row).

As the farmer (Oo Ar) sowed (sew) his seed (point) some of it fell on rocky ground (spin). The seed (point) settled under the rocks and started to grow (row). But the ground (spin) was hard here too. The plants only had shallow roots. When the sun got really hot the plants withered and died because the roots could not suck up enough water from the ground (spin).

As the farmer (Oo Ar) sowed, (sew) his seed (point) some of it fell among the weeds. The seed (point) settled into the ground (spin) and started to grow (row.) But so did the weeds. Soon the thorns and thistles had grown (row) higher than the plants and the plants died because they had no light.

As the farmer (Oo ar) sowed (sew) his seed (point) lots of the seed (point) fell on ground (spin) where the soil was good. The seed (point) settled into the good soil and started to grow (row).

The plants had long roots and tall stems and, as the sun shone, golden ears of grain appeared on the top. 40 seeds (point), 60 seeds (point), or even 100 seeds (point) from each little seed (point) that the farmer (Oo Ar) had sown (sew).
