The rain (pitter patter) continued to fall. It fell and fell for 40 days. It rained (Pitter patter) until the whole earth was covered in water (splish splash). There wasn't an inch of dry land left anywhere.

But after 40 days suddenly the rain (pitter patter) stopped. The Sun came out and Noah and his wife and his sons and their wives, and all the animals in the boat Ahoy there!) bobbed around on the water (splish splash).

Slowly the water (splish Splash) got lower and lower. Each day it went down just a little bit, until, 150 days later, as Noah was just waking up one morning, there was a great screeching and graunching sound from the bottom of the boat (Ahoy there!).

"Lucky I built (bang bang) it so well," said Noah to himself. When he looked out of the window he saw that the boat (Ahoy there!) had come to rest on the top of a great mountain. But as far as Noah could see there was still water (splish splash) in every direction.

Every day Noah looked out of the boat (Ahoy there!) and every day he could see that the water (splish Splash) had gone down just a little bit further. But the mountain was high and Noah couldn't see whether the land at the bottom was dry.

"How will I know when the earth is dry," he thought to himself. Then Noah had an idea. He took a Dove (Coo coo) and he opened the window and set it free. "If there is dry land," he thought, "the Dove (Coo coo) will find somewhere to settle and will not come back." Noah watched as the Dove (Coo coo) flew far away. He waited and waited and waited. He was just about to give up waiting when, away in the distance he saw a little dot coming toward him. It was the Dove (Coo coo) returning to the boat (Ahoy there!) because there was no dry land to settle on yet. The earth was still covered in water (splish splash).

Noah brought the Dove (Coo coo) back into the boat (Ahoy there!) and waited seven days. Then he set the Dove (coo coo) free again. Again it flew off into the distance, far far away. Noah waited; Again he was just about to give up waiting when, away in the distance he saw a dot coming toward him. It was the Dove (coo coo) returning home, but this time, as Noah brought him back in the Ark he saw he had a freshly picked leaf in his beak.

"Ah Hah!" thought Noah to himself, "the tops of the trees are showing. It won't be long before the water (splish splash) has gone."

Noah waited 7 more days and then sent the Dove (coo coo) out again. He watched it fly far far off into the distance and then Noah waited and waited and waited. This time the Dove (Coo coo) did not come back.

Noah gave a great shout: "The land is dry! The water (splish splash) has gone!" With that he opened all the doors in the boat (Ahoy there!). He pulled off the covers and lowered the gang-plank. Slowly the animals started to leave.

There were:

Elephants (Trumpet)

Horses (Neigh neigh)

Lions (roar roar)

Monkeys (ugh ugh)

Frogs (Croak croak)

Ducks (Quack Quack)

Snakes (Hiss hiss)

and even birds (tweet tweet)

(Add any other animals you like)

Animal after animal after animal all started to make their way down the mountain and head out into the newly dry world.

Noah and his wife and his sons and their wives stood and watched. Noah lifted his hands up to heaven. As he did so God (Alleluia) painted a beautiful rainbow in the sky.

"Thank you for saving us God (Alleluia)," said Noah, "thank you!"
